ragam

On March 1, 1976 National Institute of Technology Calicut, then known as Regional Engineering College (REC) woke up to a shocking news. Mr. P. Rajan, then a student of the institute and a cultural icon of the campus went missing. The events which followed, changed the whole political scenario of Kerala. In remembrance of Rajan, the very first edition of Ragam was launched under the name 'All Kerala Rajan Memorial Music Competition'. After 37 years, Ragam has grown into a Mega Cultural Fest with over 60 events and exciting workshops, numerous exhibitions and much more. Each Ragam leaves behind something which has made it a legacy and the fest has evolved into a feeling. A feeling which made people cross dates when the year reached Ides of March. Ragam proshows attract crowds so huge that every year each guest celebrity apologises to the fans eagerly waiting outside. Many bands like Agam have claimed their glory through the performances which they gave at Ragam. Ragam '09 proclaimed itself as "A Cult. A Culture". Today this cult has many followers, each one with different expectations. The smile on their faces widen each year as they say "See you next time, Ragam".

National Institute of Technology-Calicut will host 'Sneharagam' on March 8

The National Institute of Technology-Calicut (NIT-C) will host 'Sneharagam'- a cultural festival for the specially-abled children on March 8.

According to organisers, the social initiative, which was conceived in 2002, is an integral part of 'Ragam', the socio-cultural and literary festival of NIT-C, and will create a helpful atmosphere for the children to display their talents and skills.

Remember the creative little flying machine with a camera attached to it, created by the character Joy Lobo and perfected by Rancho in the movie '3 Idiots'? Well, the students of NIT-C can feel proud that their fellow batchmates have created a similar one, which they used successfully during Ragam 2014, the annual cultural fest of NIT-C.

Kunal Kamble (civil engineering), Ashib M Ashraf (second year mechanical engineering), Laxmikant Banjarey (final year civil engineering) and G B Koushik Rata (second year mechanical engineering) are the four undergraduate students behind the creation. They call themselves 'Aero Unwire' and started working on this project four years ago. Four years later and with several modifications, the team finally launched the quadrotor 'Vidyuth.' A quadrotor, which is also known as a quadcopter, is a multicopter lifted using four rotors. This team of gizmo freaks mounted a camera on to it and launched this outstanding creation, one of the first from NITC during their techfest Tathva Vidyuth was a show-stealer when it came flying out of nowhere right into the centre of activity at Ragam 2014 on the first day of the fest.
